Winemaker's Notes

2013 was a challenging but highly successful vintage. A warm dry start to spring with some moderate frost pressure finished warmer and drier than average. Diligent irrigation kept our vineyards fresh throughout the dry and warmer than average summer, with bushfire pressure imminent around the state early in the season. March and April, our critical picking months, were again dry and warm, bringing on an early harvest in Tasmania by one week. A timely rain event in late March kept the vines happy but left little to no threat of disease or dilution. Slightly warmer conditions with just above average yields drew a strong comparison to the great 2008 and 2010 vintages.
